

Handsome is as handsome does

Jody Azzouni

Originally published in Pleiades 19:1, Winter, 1999
© 1999, 2001 Jody Azzouni

I prefer the little evils, the holocausts of inconvenience.
I shingle up to my victims,
and while time clods along,
my fingers dance around the moments like ghosts. Magicians steal insight: I prefer the more tangible rewards sleepy pockets offer.
Each wallet is a tame world
with its tiny economy,
flat people,
and leather borders.
As God must,
I skip from world to world,
take what I want,
and leave the rest in the trash.