

Hereafter

Jody Azzouni

Originally published in Cider Press Review 2.
© 2001 Jody Azzouni

A windshieldded fist of inertia, the treacherous arc of nowdead bird, all are omens: Light goes where flesh can't follow. Glass, a border like the surface of water.
Fish rise to heaven on a string; we pray for salvation.